

Marta DeVries Sullivan

Marta is currently serving as the Director of Engagement and Outreach Integration and is the lead planner for Modern Day Marine at the Marine Corps Association. Prior to her current position, she has served in both the military and civilian sectors specializing in curriculum and content development, executive event management, project management, and leadership coaching. She recently retired from the Marine Corps Reserves after 22 years of service in the logistics field.

As a veteran and spouse of an active-duty Marine, Marta is passionate about programs and initiatives that support and promote the well-being, quality of life, professional development, and economic opportunity of military spouses, veterans, and their families.

Marta is a graduate of the University of Virginia and Marine Corps Command and Staff College from which she holds a Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy and Master of Military Studies, respectively. She currently resides in Quantico, Virginia with her husband Farrell and four sons Peter, Daniel, Brendan, and Joey.